The Massacro On the Margaret Brandon-How the Captain Was Killed-Description of the South Sea Islands.

(From the San Francisco Alta California, Nov. 13.]
A genticman who has just arrived in this city from the South Sea Islands furnishes us with the following particulars of this strange affair:—
The Margarot irmadon, Daniel Blacket, master, safled from Atimacono, Tahiti, in March last, bound direct for Aucaland, with a cargo of cotton. Captain Blacket had received orders to the effect that he should, on his return trip, call at some group of Islands or Island (and he was to use his own judgment in that matter) for the purpose of obtaining a cargo of Kanaka immigrants to labor upon the Atimacono blastadion. Mr. Stewart was forced to this from the fast that the contract of the Chinamen who now labor for him has about expired, and they will leave him, to a man, unless illegally held to further labor, which is quite an easy act for him to do in Tahit, ludging from the past.

After having performed his voyage to New Zealand define tabor, which is quite an easy act for him to do in Tahiti, ludging from the bast.

After having performed his voyage to New Zesland Captain Bacacet took his doparture for the Githert Archipelago, or better known to the world as the Ringsmill Group. His avowed purpose was to obtain bative laborers for Mr. Stewart, of Attuacono. He was to get them through treachery and deceit—he knew very west that he could not get them in any other way—therefore he decoyed them on board under the pretext of trading for occomuts. He did not want their cocomuts; he only wanted their bodies—bones, sinews, muscless—their human fiesh, to sell and feed the hungry man of Atimoono; therefore, when they came on board, biscutts, shirts and trinkets were thrown down between decks, where they must descend to get them, and ween

In this mean, decestable manner Captain Blacket and his mate, who call themselves Christian men, who have been reared in schools and rocked in the readle of religion, in this low, faise way obtained from Byron and Hope Islands upward of 150 human bodies for sale. How his more than human hearts must have leaped with Joy at the thought that he could thus add a few more pairry dollars to his purse and bind 150 human hearts in years of misery and toil? For Mr. Blacket must have known as well as any man at Atimaono that the natives of these out of the way islands received only the mame of two dollars per month for their faoor. At the end of every month they get a tioket, which is presented to the clerk of the store, who gives them a hickory shirt or miserable pair of bine cotton pants, as the case may be, and they are paid. But Captain Blacket meets the bark Annie, of Melbourne, hovering, like himself, about the islands, and which has on beard 159 men, human bodies, and all for sale. Captain Blacket bays thom for Mr. Stewart, under the protext that the Annie has no water for them; therefore he has the humanity to transfer them to Tahitt, instead of to their own native island, which is plainly if sight, but a few mise distant. They have text that he Annie has no water for them, therefore he has the humanity to transfer them to Tahiti, instead of to their own native island, which is plainly iff sight, but a few miles distant. They have been long enough on board to discover the treachery of the white man, and they determine to regain their liberty by the death of the paleiaces at the first opportunity. It is not long in presenting tiself. Capitain Blacket, being drains and blind with his success in getting natives, invites them all, 300 in number, to come up on the spar deck to accept a few more presents to decorate their bodies
and soften their minds towards their white captors and their own sore destiny. But it was only the signal for the white man's death. They were no sooner on deck than the slaughter commenced.
The captain, Mr. Lattin and several others were killed, and the natives for a white were masters of the ship; but the mate retook her again by blowing the ship; but the mate retook her again by blowing up the upper deck forward of the man haten, which operation frightened the natives overboard. Some, perhaps, reached the shore, others were drowned, and many were murdered in the attempt to get on

The Margaret Brandon arrived safely at Tahiti.

Doard again.

The Margaret Brandon arrived safety at Tahiti. She now hes at Atimaono, fitting out with the avowed intention of returning to those islands for natives and other purposes of revenge. Her present captain (the mate) declared to us on board his vessel at Atimaono that his intentions were to return to Hope and Byron Islands for native worken, and to take as prisoner, dead or alive, a whitemen, which has an iron grating on either of its four sides, reaching from the lower to the spar deck. The hatchway itself is covered with an iron grating with a strong tock on either side. She is to be armed and to carry a crew of forty men, all told. The present mate and second mate informed us that they were going to fight; that they had signed an agreement to that effect, and that they knew perfectly well where they were going. They are Englishmen.

The captain is to take with him his old interpreter, who, he says, knows how to read and write Egmiss and native, and can therefore put or sign all the Kanakray unions to a contract and there he deep had deep not considered to a contract and there he deep had the canada and can therefore put or sign all the Kanakray unions to a contract and the sea he deep had deep he deep he

And thus it is that the inhabitants of Southern tolynesia are to be pursued and captured by a vessel ying the French protectorate flag, and sading direct rom Atimaono, Tiniti.

The South Sea Islands.

A correspondent of the Alla California furnishes the following description of this interesting group of

siands:—

EXKAHONGA.

This island lies in latitude 10 deg. 02 min. south and longitude 161 deg. 10 min. west. Its height varies from six to thirty feet above the level of the sea. It is a largoon island, but there is no passage into it except for a two or three ton light. There is no pear is shell in its lagoon. There is out little soil except sand and coral, yet nearly the whole island is but a dense forest of eccanut trees, all in a fine, healthy, bearing state. There is an article of lood found here which resembles and grows like taro, in watery patches of a bottom of soft sand and line; its root is a carrot yellow and shaped very muon like our common turnip. It is largely cultivated by the natives, and they consider it their stapic article of food. It is prepared by grating and mixing with it the juice squeezed out of the coconduct meat; is is them baxed, and tastes like new corn broad. Fish are to be fad in abundance. The pandanus tree grows here in its most flourishing state, the leaves of which are all easential to the natives in thatching their houses.

are in its most flourishing state, the leaves of which are all easential to the natives in thatching their houses.

The people are a fine, pure, hardy and athletic race, and more inclined to habor than most of the flouring state, they are them, except dying of old age. They are very fond of European clothing when they can get it fill wear it very jauntily. The young men and wonden are regular in form and fair in feature; much more fine and fair, we think, than the Tainings. A few years ago the young girls were not flowed to go out during the day for lear of browning their soft dusky skins. At hight they were free to roam at pleasure. They now do the cooking and existed work.

The houses here are far superior to the native houses of Tahitt; they are built of coral rock, plasted outside and in, whilewashed and thatched with pandanus leaves. They have been taught this mode of building by a Rorotongan missionary, who has been hving and teaching among them tor some afteen years. All the young men and women read and write in their mative tongue, and understand gemething of the four rules of arithmetic. A few years ago this island numbered some 1,200 inhabitants; it is now reduced to 250 men, women and children. Many were taken to Peru, and others are still laboring at Tahit, Sandwich Islands, Fanning's Island, Caroline Island and other pinces, all under the contract system.

MANCHIELL.

This island lies in lautude ten degrees two minutes west, and bears south-southeast frem Rieron's, distant some twenty-dive mites. Its extreme length finances south, longitude 161 degrees two minutes from two to six miles. There is a greater surplus of cocoanuts here than we ever saw at any other island. In some places the old cocoanuts are tying upon the ground from one to two feet thick. Its about nine and a half miles. Its extreme length is about nine and a half miles. Its extreme length is about nine and a half miles. The reader was a moral. It now numbers about 300; they, like help for here is a greater surplus of one race. There we know that things like this have occurred in Tahiti, but with only one foreigner for whom these Tahiti, but with only one foreigner for whom these poor people labor—or, rather, whose slaves they are. We have it upon good authority, besides knowing it ourselves, that there is only one foreigner upon the bland who countenances the maitreatment of his native laborers.

This is another lagoon island, covered with cooganut trees. Its inner take is rich in the fluosi varieties of pear ishell. Tare grows well here. Fish are pientiful also. Its outer reef is covered with the best kinds of beenle-le-mer. Hogs and fowls were introduced here by the London missionary sings outer twenty years ago. They are now quite numerous. The original number of its inhabitants have been reduced to the small figure of 150, through the emigration policy of Peru and Tahiti, though the former has long since ceased her persecutions of these poor, harmiess people through the interposition of France and the French protectorate of Tahiti; but it was done as a grand political stroke, or conep d'état, for the protection of her celebrated Tahitian dolony, in order that it might roit together in a commercial monopoly the different races of Southern Polynesia in the bonds of shavery on the Atimaono plantation, the success of whose manager seems to outrival the successful times of the African shave period. But we hope and expect that he will not meet with such bold success in the future, as his old friend and stannoh protector, Court de la Ronciere, his Majossy's Commissair Imperial, has been forced to "loave between two days" of fare worse. We believe that he has been replaced by a far more humane and just man.

MANARONARO.

This is another fine lacoon island. Its lake aboands in fine peart shell and in the best varieties of the bechelement. It is covered with the occount tree, but there is no surplus of the net, as a heavy blight fell upon them a few years ago. There are about 29 handred; inhabitants here. Their original number has been thus thinned down by philanthropic specuators, under those ultra liberal governments, Tahiu and Peru.

NOUS.

This is a large and high island. It now numbers some 7,000 inhabitants. Many of these people, men and women, have been transferred to Taniti and

This is a large and high island. It now numbers some 7,000 inhabitants. Many of these people, men and women, have been transferred to Tanitt and Morea, where they are working out their term of service—two years, we believe. They are regularly paid and are otherwise well treated. None of these poor people have been so unfortunate as to reach the Atimaono plantation.

This island produces immense quantities of the coconnut, a great surplus of which might be manifactured into oil at a very low rate. Fungus groys upon every hill and in every valley, and may be gathered for a mere trifle. A good quality of cotton grows wild, and is also cultivated for immediate wants of the people, who make beds and pillows of it. It may be gathered in its raw state for two and and a half and three cents per pound. Hogs are raised here in great numbers, and may be had for two and a half and three cents per pound. Fowis are also plentiful and cheap—a bit aplece. Large tomanu trees grow here and may be had for the cuting. There are several other kinds of beautifully grained wood, which might become valuable in the manufacture of household furniture were it once introduced into the market. Yams, tare, sweet potatoes, baranas, plantains and several other varieties of fruit are plentiful.

HABAIRI.

This is a lone and uninhabited lagoon island, and trouteed into the market. Yams, taro, sweet botatoes, bananas, piantains and several other varieties of fruit are pientiful.

This is a lone and unlinabited lagoon island, and lies nearly equidistant from four of the above. It is about ten mies in length and varies from three to ix miles in breadth. There is a fine passage into its lagoon. The depth is from one to twenty fathoms and the anchorage is as good as can possibly be desired. Its lagoon is also studded with little islets, around which may be found pearl shell, cowries, the and myriads of beche-lo-mer. Fish here are of greater variety, tamer and larger than we have ever seen anywhere in the Pacific. They will weigh from one to 150 pounds, and thousands may be caught in a day, either with net or line.
They ourival the celebrated fish of Amsterdam or St. Paul's in the Indian Ocean. The outer reef of this island is also covered with rish and beche-le-mer.
There is considerable soil on this island, much more than we have ever seen on any other lagoon island;
there is therefore quite a variety of thrifts growing trees here, but no water. Would the home government protect, there is no island we know of where a cocount on plantation could be more advantageously estatilished.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

As the time draws nigh for the session of Congress Wall street manifests increasing interest in the financial measures which are to receive the considdirected to the question of a resumption of specie payments, and the speculative fraternity are already alive to the prospect of gain which the agitation of the question opens up to them. Let it be understood that there is a dangerous movement on foot to attempt forcible resumption, despite the laws of trade, and the conservative element of the national legislature will be prepared to meet the issue. Did the present movement ispring from any place but Wall street; did it originate elsewhere than among the stock and gold gamblers of that locality; who are always so sensitive to financial changes; did it come from the great class of capitalists who are constantly opening up and furthering enter-prises of all kinds, it would be worthy of special and prompt action. But what merchant has yet called on Congress to bring about the resumption of specie payments? Where is the manufacturer who has means a deathblow to business throughout the counout of work. The present urgent movement is from Wall street, where speculators make money by either the upward or downward course of values. Those who are familiar with the technicalities of the street will understand why they can do so. Just phecies of legislation in Congress favoring specie payments. They will then buy in the gold and make money for themselves. So far the movement has had little success in the pecuniary way; for the market has been buoyed by such buyers as the importing merchants, who already have a profit in covering their imports at the present prices of gold, and also by certain individuals of a conservative, if not gloomy, temperament, who are always expect-ing a financial crash, and consequently believe gold is always cheap at any price. It would not be necessary to give much heed to this movement so far as the eventual result is concerned. It may be set down as a certainty that the government canlegislate as it may. The whole history of England, from 1797 to 1819, proves it. the danger arises from the struggles and efforts to accomplish resumption. There are speculators who would have us believe the government could resume on the 1st of January, 1870. Suppose Congress should, on its assembling, immediately decree Bontwell's exhibit of November 1 the government deducted nearly thirty millions for the outstanding terest on the public debt, which, if paid on November 1, would have left the Treasury with only thirtysix millions of gold. On the 1st of January another one per cent will be due on the interest bearing portion of the debt, which would further reduce this sum to sixteen millions. The only accession would be from the customs receipts meantime, which would leave the Treasury in possession of about thirty millions of gold to begin the redemp-tion of nearly four hundred millions of paper money on the 1st of January, 1870. It is to be hoped, in view of these facts, that Congress will not so stuttify itself and iso jeopardize the business interests of the country as to attempt any scheme so Utofive to seven per cent as the ruling rates on all classes of collaterals. The abundance of funds and ings in discounts, and prime acceptances met with readier sale, particularly after the middle of the week. The foreign exchange market was steady week. The foreign exchange market was steady and strong, but dull. The agitation of the gold question has produced a very conservative feeling among the importers and the line of imports for the week shows a large decrease, not only as compared with previous weeks, but also as compared with the corresponding period of 1868. The effect of the same agutation was visible in the fluctuation of gold between the extremes of 127% and 123%. To-morrow the Gold Exchange Bank re-sumes operations as a Clearing House for gold dealings. In the stock market business was far below the general average, although the general tendency of prices was upward in response to improved rail-way earnings on the Western roads, whose receipts, it was thought, would be very unfavorably affected by the depression in the grain market. At the close of the week the feeling was more buoyant. On Saturday there was considerable animation in South-North Carolinas were heavy and declined to 36, the The old Tennessees have been again subjected to a pressure of sales, owing to the impression that there is too wide a difference between their price and that of the new bonds since the official announcement that all Total for the week ending November 20...$131,242

The government bond market was at firs strong and active, in consequence of the large pur-chase on Wednesday by the Sub-Treasury, but became weak toward the close, owing to the decline in gold and the renewed agitation of the specie payments question. The weekly statement of the associated banks is unfavorable, showing as it does a loss in reserve of nearly a million and a half of dollars. The Treasury movements during the week, which expired Friday morning, go to account for a large portion of the decrease in legal tenders. Other things being equal, this loss will be made up next week. Were the bank statement made up each Monday morning the un-favorable features of this week would not appear. The loss in legal tenders is over two and a naif millions, owing partially to the facts above referred to, and partially to shipments to the West and Southwest.

An examination of the statement shows that the banks have enlarged their loans to the extent of nearly two millions. Now, as the deposits have been at a standstill, it is evident that the remittances westward have been largely composed of these loans. In other words, the Western banks not having funds here upon which to draw, Eastern houses with Western connections have shipped currency to them. The last two statements con-
